

The Northern Cardinal is perhaps the most recognizable of American birds. As the mascot of a major league baseball team, a professional football team, and numerous colleges and universities, the cardinal is somewhat of a celebrity. In addition, the cardinal is the state bird of seven U.S. States! Common throughout the east, the cardinal can easily be attracted to feeders with sunflower seeds.